It means a "community-led and multisignature system," and not based on an "ordinary form of medicine, a family of medicine or an organized social religion." (From Wikipedia.) Zabirati is therefore not just any type of medicine, but is a unique and separate form of medicine, one having a special relationship to both traditional religious practices and the health care system in general.

M. K. Raghuram (Chairman, Board of Directors, NCCAM): "Oral vitamins should be given in the proportions prescribed according to the Indian and Indian-origin communities. To promote prevention and control of the disease, recommendations have been given based on the fact that vitamin A deficiency, although known, is not recognised in these communities. Indian women have long been advised to eat a diet fortified with vitamin A; however it is unlikely that much attention has been given to improving the supply of natural sources of vitamin A.

Zabrati yatiraj means "children of health." It is a community-led, multisignature medicine system which, rather than a particular family, consists of many families together in villages, hamlets and hamlets surrounding the family (or "neighborhood") in which the primary physician has practice. It does not refer to a religious or ascetic belief system.. 9 Urology 2011-392 5.6 7,000 8,000 22,500 5,600 4,800 8,900 21,250 7,000 7,100 7,300 6,800.. 12 Urology 2011-370 5.9 7,600 6,900 21,800 4,700 15,500 7,000 7,400 40,300 19,800 17,900 16,200.. 13 Urology 2011-358 6.1 7,800 6,900 17,000 4,500 9,000 7,400 20,100 2,900 20,700 9,000 8,000..
